READING FOR PLEASURE

What we know works

Centre for Literacy in Primary Education

Research from the Power of Reading Project
READING FOR PLEASURE

What works?

The Centre for Literacy in Primary Education is an independent UK charity with a global reputation for the quality of our work.

We exist to promote high standards in the teaching of literacy through our high quality, trusted teacher professional development and our renowned classroom based research. We particularly emphasise the importance of books and literature in enabling children to become confident, happy and enthusiastic readers and writers, with all the benefits this brings.

Since 2004 we have run the ‘Power of Reading’ project. This is a whole school development project where teachers attend high quality training, have access to a wide range of quality children’s literature and work with their colleagues to develop practice around the teaching of reading in their school. Over the ten years of the project we have worked with over 3500 teachers from more than 2000 schools in over 50 Local Authorities. Every year we collect data about children’s achievement and progress and we ask teachers to share examples of how they have changed whole school practice. The practical examples are all collected on the project website.
The project has given us a unique perspective on the successful teaching of reading in primary schools. We have constructed the professional development sessions using the most up to date published research as well as insights from authors, poets and illustrators. We spend time carefully selecting the 20+ project texts which are given to teachers on the course and they reflect the very best of current children's literature. As well as this we collect numerous examples of effective reading practice from our project teachers during each of our development sessions. These examples of practice are uploaded to the project site so that the teachers have the benefit of face to face training and remote support with examples from real classrooms.

This year Power of Reading is in its tenth year. In celebration of this remarkable achievement and to support schools in the implementation of the National Curriculum 2014 we are publishing a series of accessible and practical papers to help schools develop aspects of a reading for pleasure school that we know are important.

Louise Johns-Shepherd, Chief Executive, CLPE

This is the first of these papers. It collects together ten things that teachers have told us need to be considered and developed in schools that are successful in encouraging a lifelong love of literacy learning. We hope you find it useful.

For more information about the CLPE visit www.clpe.org.uk

For more information about Power of Reading visit www.clpe.org.uk/powerofreading

*The quotes in this document come from the reflective evaluations of the 487 teachers on Power of Reading 2013-14
1 Developing an ethos and an environment that excites, enthuses, inspires and values

The Power of Reading allows us to spend time with teachers thinking about the way in which they show and display books and work with books in their classrooms and schools. We have found that the way in which the reading provision is set up and accessed can be key to the engagement of children in the reading process. The role and attitudes of the teachers are key in creating an environment that promotes reading as a socially engaging activity that is valued and encouraged. Book areas where books and information about books are displayed attractively and where browsing, choosing and reading can take place are a visible way of establishing and promoting a positive ethos for reading for pleasure.

Learn more: .................................................................

Power of Reading
clpe.por.org.uk

Power of Reading in the Early Years
clpe.org.uk/POREY

Power of Reading Plus
clpe.org.uk/porplus

“Book corners have been developed to excite and enthuse children about reading – we have developed author displays in the book corners so if children like one book by the author then they can try others”

“As a school we have developed our reading areas with a focus on making them more engaging for the children. Pupils are now much more enthusiastic about selecting books and contributing to the reading area.”
High quality texts with depth and interest in story, character, illustration, vocabulary, structure and subject matter

We know that there are books which lend themselves to being talked about, thought through, returned to and which are engaging for children for a variety of reasons. They tend to be texts with powerful stories which engage children, stir ideas and feelings and excite the reader’s interest and imagination. They are books that children will want to re-read, to savour and will remember. Texts such as these can take many forms – poetry, picture books (with or without words), information texts, chapter books, modern stories or famous classics. It is important that schools have a range of quality reading material and that they plan to enable children to engage with the texts on a meaningful level.

Learn more: .................................................................

Raising Achievement in Writing
clpe.org.uk/RAW

Planning Creatively Around a Text KS1 and KS2
clpe.org.uk/planningks1
clpe.org.uk/planningks2
Reading aloud is probably the most important thing that teachers can do and needs to be a frequent and regular part of each school day. Reading aloud slows written language down and enables children to hear and take in tunes and patterns. It enables children to experience and enjoy stories that they might not otherwise meet.

By reading well-chosen books aloud, teachers help classes to become communities of readers – ensuring that they can share in experiences of a wide repertoire of books they enjoy and get to know well.

Learn more:
- Group and Guided Reading clpe.org.uk/guidedreading
- Power of Reading clpe.por.org.uk
- Power of Reading in the Early Years clpe.org.uk/POREY
- Power of Reading Plus clpe.org.uk/porplus
- Language, Learning and Play through Core Texts in EYFS clpe.org.uk/LLP

Pupils have commented on how much they loved being read to by the teacher as it helped them to ‘imagine the story better’.

All the children love being read to daily. They are all able to talk meaningfully and discuss reading better.

I even had Y6 asking for bedtime reading on our residential trip!
4 Teachers who are knowledgeable about children’s literature

When teachers develop their own experience, preferences and enthusiasms in reading, their personal engagement and reflective involvement as adult readers helps them to be very clear about the nature of reading and the experience of being a reader. This has an impact on teaching practice.

“"A synergy of ongoing subject knowledge development and personal reflection opened up new pathways to effective pedagogy and more inclusive practices in the teaching of reading."” Cremin, T; Mottram, M; Collins, F; Powell S and Safford, K (2009). Teachers as readers: building communities of readers. Literacy, 43(1), pp. 11-19.

Learn more: clpe.org.uk/englishsubjectleader
Corebooks Online clpe.org.uk/publication/1
Developing your Primary School Library clpe.org.uk/developyouurlibrary
Creating a community of readers with opportunities to share responses and opinions

Reading is fundamentally a social phenomenon. Early shared experiences are internalised and become the basis of what children can do independently and what they understand reading to be. It is really important that the invitations to be part of the school reading community involve as many people as possible and include all staff as well as parents and families.

Book groups, books shops, interactive displays, reading competitions, reading volunteers and book related fundraising activities are all ways of involving the wider community and helping to create a community of readers.

Learn more: clpe.org.uk/resources

Power of Reading Plus clpe.org.uk/porplus

I run an afternoon book club which is very popular and promotes books to other children in the school. The children are engaged and keen to read the next book.

The biggest change is that in every class you will see quality reading books that children have brought from home as they have asked parents for books instead of toys as gifts.
6 Planning for talking about books and stories, providing structures within which to do this

Children need frequent, regular and sustained opportunities to talk together about the books that they are reading as a whole class. The more experience they have of talking together like this, the better they get at making explicit the meanings that a text holds for them, helping the class as a whole to reach shared understanding of ideas and issues. Talking about books is supportive to all readers and writers but is especially empowering for children who find literacy difficult.

Learn more: .................................................................

Inspiring Writers KS1 and KS2
clke.org.uk/writingks1
clke.org.uk/writingks2

Group and Guided Reading KS1 and KS2
clke.org.uk/guidedreadingks1
clke.org.uk/guidedreadingks2

“Building much more book talk into the planning, before even opening the book, has stimulated the children’s thoughts and questions ........................................

“Children have developed in their ability to discuss their views about books – book talk is very successful”
Understanding the importance of illustration in reading both in terms of creating a text and responding to a text

Illustrated and picture books are tremendously important resources for all readers. Understanding how pictures and illustrations work with the text to create meaning for the reader is a high level reading skill. Opportunities to draw in response to texts can help and encourage children to move into an imaginary world or understand a character. Drawing helps children to begin to articulate their response to what they read and can help them to analyse the ways in which the writer has used language and images.

Learn more:

Power of Pictures
clpe.org.uk/powerofpictures

The Power of the Picture Book for Teaching Mathematics in the Early Years and KS1
clpe.org.uk/picturebookmaths

clpe.org.uk/course/78

Get Writing! Book Making with Paul Johnson
clpe.org.uk/bookmaking
Using drama and role play to help children to understand and access texts

Drama and role play provide immediate routes into the world of a story and allow children to explore texts actively. They enable children to put themselves into a particular character’s shoes and imagine how things would look from that point of view. Through drama and role play children can deepen their understanding and imagining of characters and events. They can then extend this understanding to their reading and their writing.

Learn more:

Power of Reading
clpe.org.uk/por

Planning Creatively Around a Text KS1 and KS2
clpe.org.uk/planningks1
clpe.org.uk/planningks2

Inspiring Writers KS1 and KS2
clpe.org.uk/writingks1
clpe.org.uk/writingks2
9 Working with authors and author/illustrators to understand the process of creating books

“Writers working with children and young people in schools offer them experiences that can inspire and unlock their creative expression, regardless of age, gender, home background or attitudes… Many schools agree there are benefits that make a significant contribution to how children learn about the excitement and power of language and the imagination.”

Magic dust that lasts. Writers in schools – sustaining the momentum – Sue Horner – Arts Council.

Learn more: ........................................................................................................................

Get Writing! Book Making with Paul Johnson
clpe.org.uk/bookmaking

Power of Pictures
clpe.org.uk/pop

Poetryline website
www.poetryline.org.uk
10 Using literature beyond the literacy lesson – cross curricular planning with quality literature as the starting point

Teachers have told us again and again how successful they have been when they use a text as the centre of their planning. Many schools are now taking a cross-curricular approach starting with a quality text and using it to link other subjects. This puts reading at the heart of the curriculum and shows the importance and value of learning to read.

Learn more: ..............................................................

Let’s Write! Cross-Curricular Approaches with James Carter
clpe.org.uk/letswrite

We’re Going on a Science Hunt
clpe.org.uk/sciencehunt

The Power of the Picture Book for Teaching Mathematics in the Early Years and KS1
clpe.org.uk/picturebookmaths
clpe.org.uk/course/78

“A greater use of cross-curricular teaching – incorporating art and music into literacy lessons. Children have become so vocal and expressive

Reading now taught throughout subjects, with more cross-curricular links to create a deeper understanding of texts

power of reading
READING FOR PLEASURE – WHAT WORKS

1. Developing an ethos and an environment that excites, enthuses, inspires and values
2. High quality texts with depth and interest in story, character, illustration, vocabulary, structure and subject matter
3. A read aloud programme
4. Teachers who are knowledgeable about children’s literature
5. Creating a community of readers with opportunities to share responses and opinions
6. Planning for talking about books and stories, providing structures within which to do this
7. Understanding the importance of illustration in reading both in terms of creating a text and responding to a text
8. Using drama and role play to help children to understand and access texts
9. Working with authors and author/illustrators to understand the process of creating books
10. Using literature beyond the literacy lesson – cross-curricular planning with quality literature as the starting point
Power of Reading Project 2014–15

Reading for pleasure, achievement for life

Our school has really taken Power of Reading to their hearts. Thank you – the project is helping us to be the kind of teachers we want to be.

PoR School 2013–2014